CHAPTER MCI.

A SUPPLEMENT to the act, entitled "An act to prevent the exportation of bread and flour not merchantable."

[Original act vol. 1, p. 523, chap. 925, and see the notes thereto subjoined.]

SECT. I. WHEREAS the acts for the inspection of flour and other staple articles of this state, have been found by experience to be highly beneficial, by establishing a fair reputation at foreign markets, and thereby encreasing the demand for our commodities: And whereas superfine flour has latterly become a principal article of exportation from this state, and the laws in being have not made provision to guard against frauds in the exportation thereof:

SECT. II. Be it therefore enacted, and it is hereby enacted by the Representatives of the Freemen of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in General Assembly met, and by the authority of the same, That, from and after the first day of November next, all flour exported or intended to be exported from this state, which shall be branded or otherwise marked as superfine, shall, before it shall be laden on board of any ship or vessel for exportation, be inspected and examined by the proper officer appointed for the inspection of flour, or his deputy, in the manner directed and described in the eleventh section of the act, to which this act is a supplement: And if the said inspector shall judge the same to be of sufficient fineness and quality in all respects to pass, and be exported as good superfine flour, of the proper merchantable standard, and as such he shall brand the same with the arms of this state, as is directed in and by the said recited act, to which this act is a supplement, in a fair and distinguishable manner; provided that every miller or bolter of such flour may, if he shall think proper, mark every such cask with such brand of superfine, before the same shall be removed from the place

Inspection of flour, as directed and regulated.
